PORTFOLIO OF RESPONSIBILITIES AS VICE PRESIDENT FOR RESEARCH AND ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT:

As the Chief Research Officer for the university, I am responsible for promoting the research, scholarship, and artistic creativity in support of the entire mission of the institution. This role includes oversight of the Office of Research and Economic Development (ORED), with the constituent components of a sponsored programs office, a research development team, intramural funding programs, office of research integrity and compliance, technology transfer, intellectual property management, and economic development. It also includes direction of several core facilities and centers. Reporting directly to the President, I serve on the President’s Cabinet as a member of the institution’s senior leadership team. I work closely with the Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs (as well as with other vice presidential units) to ensure that research, scholarship, and artistic activities are facilitated and infused throughout the entire mission of the university.

Appointed to the vice presidency in February of 2013, my term is slated to run until the conclusion of a national search for a permanent Vice President for Research and Economic Development.

The various components and functions of the Office of Research and Economic Development are elaborated in the following sections, with a highlight on my long-standing involvement as the Associate Vice President. In my current role of Vice President, I now bear ultimate authority and responsibility for all of these components and functions, including the management of the overall strategic, operational, budgetary, and personnel activities of ORED.

PORTFOLIO OF RESPONSIBILITIES AS AVPR:

Strategic and Operational Leadership

As an core member of the senior leadership team in the Office of Research and Economic Development (ORED), I worked directly with the VPR to establish priorities, set strategic goals, and implement the tactical operations within ORED and in cooperation with other senior leaders at the university to promote, elevate, and facilitate research excellence at UNT.

Areas of direct leadership and supervision included:

Intramural Research Funding Programs. ORED funds and oversees a variety of internal grant programs to seed and stimulate research accomplishments of our faculty and students. I was directly responsible for these programs, including the Research Initiation Grant program to help early-career faculty initiate their research programs, the Research Opportunities Program to provide seed funds to facilitate large extramural proposals, the Research Enabling Grant for faculty in areas with very little available extramural funding, the Research and Creativity Enhancement program for faculty in the literary and fine arts, the Junior Faculty Summer Research Fellowship, and a Small Grant program to provide short-term exigency funding. To administer the majority of these programs, I operated panel-based competitions so that applicants receive broad-based evaluations and feedback. In addition to these purely intramural programs, I also oversaw UNT’s joint seed funding competition with the Autonomous University of the State of Mexico—a program in which each university funds its own faculty member in a collaborating pair to stimulate international partnerships. In 2011 (the most recent year for which near-complete data are available), a total of $\approx 700k$ in intramural grants were awarded, which resulted in more than 60 publications, 90 professional presentations, 15 artistic performances/exhibits, and $11M$ in extramural grant proposals.
Research Integrity and Compliance. I had direct supervisory responsibility of the Office of Research Integrity and Compliance at UNT. This office coordinates research compliance in all facets, such as human subjects (IRB), animal use (IACUC and animal facilities), export controls, research misconduct, responsible conduct of research, and financial conflict of interest. I directly supervised the staff members who administer the IRB, IACUC, and export controls processes. As the universities Research Integrity Officer designated with the federal government, I evaluated all research misconduct allegations to determine whether official inquiries or investigations are warranted, and then coordinate any such inquiries or investigations. I collaborated with the UNT Toulouse Graduate School to ensure effective RCR policies and training mechanisms are in place at UNT. With respect to financial conflicts of interest, I made the initial determinations as to which financial interest disclosures represented potential conflicts and thus needed to be referred to the Financial Conflict of Interest Committee (which I also coordinated). With the advent of new federal regulations surrounding financial conflict of interest, I developed and implemented UNT’s first on-line training and disclosure process for faculty researchers to satisfy their conflict of interest requirements.

Research Policy. Because so many research policy issues intersect with compliance components (which I directly oversaw), it was only natural that I also maintain responsibility for research policy in ORED. As a member of the university’s Policy Advisory Group, I reviewed and provided input on all new and revised university policies so that the interests of UNT researchers are included and protected. I also worked directly with the Policy Advisory Group and with the UNT System Office of General Counsel to enact and revise specific university policies associated with research. The most substantial research policy actions under my direction were the revision of UNT’s research misconduct policy to allow for greater institutional flexibility while maintaining rigorous ethical and procedural standards, the massive revision of the financial conflict of interest policy to conform to new regulations from the Department of Public Health and Human Services, and the adoption of a tobacco-free zone policy to ensure compliance with research funding from the Cancer Prevention Research Institute of Texas.

Oversight of Interdisciplinary Research Units. UNT’s Center for the Study of Interdisciplinarity reported directly to ORED, and I was the senior leader assigned to its oversight. Likewise, the UNT-Chile Program needed an over-arching structure in order to effectively engage its international partners. So a steering board was devised for the oversight of the program; I chaired of that steering board.

University Research and Creativity Awards. Recognizing and rewarding great faculty researchers at UNT are important components of promoting research excellence. Since 2009, I oversaw the nomination and selection processes for several university-level research and creativity prizes, including the Competitive Funding Award, the Teacher Scholar Award, the Early Career Award for Research and Creativity, the Creative Impact Award, and the Research Leadership Award. These cash prizes are awarded at an annual reception held in honor of UNT’s research community.
Faculty Senate Committee Interaction. The UNT Faculty Senate has a standing committee, the Faculty Research Committee, charged with interacting with ORED, providing assistance with faculty research matter such as the intramural funding programs, providing input to ORED from the perspective of faculty, and providing feedback to the Faculty Senate regarding ORED actions and priorities. I was the member of the ORED core leadership team who coordinated the interactions with the Faculty Research Committee.

In addition to these areas of direct responsibility, there were a variety of other domains that fall under the oversight of the core leadership team in ORED; therefore, I shared responsibility for these components as well. Areas of general oversight and leadership included:

Research and Proposal Development. We constructed UNT's first Research Development Team (RDT) shortly after I joined the core ORED leadership team. We recruited and hired two professionals with extensive grant and funding agency experience, and a design professional. I personally led the search team for the current Director of Research Development, who was formerly a program manager for NIST. The RDT works under the general leadership of the AVPRs to improve the grant-attaining success of faculty researchers by conducting grant-writing workshops, assisting with multi-investigator/multi-institutional team formation for larger funding opportunities, providing personalized research program guidance, and reviewing and offering feedback on preliminary drafts of grant proposals. Since developing the RDT in 2009, the dollar amounts of proposals generated at UNT have increased 72% over FY 2008 figures, and the overall extramural funding has increased 31%.

Sponsored Programs. ORED houses the Office of Research Services, UNT's cradle to grave sponsored programs office. The ORED core leadership team oversees the Director Sponsored Projects in the operation of pre-award reviews for technical and budgetary compliance, proposal submission, contract negotiations, and all post-award process including effort reporting and cost accounting.

Limited Submissions. The core ORED leadership team handles UNT's decision-making regarding what proposals may be submitted when the sponsor has institutional limits. I, along with the other AVPR, conducted competitions among interested faculty, consider input from expert reviewers, then provide recommendations to the VPR, who makes the final decision.

ORED Strategic Budgeting. Although the VPR has the primary budget authority for the entire unity, strategic planning and budgetary decision-making occurs at the level of the core leadership team.

Government Relations. ORED works closely with the UNT System Office of Government Relations which is based in the state capital, as well as with our DC-based consultant to identify and promote research efforts at UNT that have potential for legislative support. In the years when direct federal appropriations were allowed, this involved the formal construction of a Green Book—a set of UNT initiatives to place before legislators and their staff members. Under current federal constraints, it involves keeping the consultant and System staff apprised of priority projects so that intersecting legislative initiatives are identified and leveraged.

Research Publications and Public Relations. ORED publicizes the research accomplishments of faculty and student researchers in a number of ways, including via collaboration with the University Relations, Communications, and Marketing unit in the publication of UNT's annual Research magazine, but also in producing a number of booklets, brochures, and fact cards directly out of our unit. To facilitate this aspect of our office, I led the search team to hire our first Research Publications Specialist. The Research Publications Specialist, under the direction of the core ORED leadership team, composes and edits contents for all research-related publications, and directly oversees the ORED web presence.

Technology Transfer. The entire Technology Transfer process at UNT is under the aegis of ORED, and thus overseen by the core leadership team. The Technology Transfer arm of ORED receives and evaluates IP disclosures, and operates processes to determine if UNT will pursue patents and licenses.

Core Facilities. The Center for the Advanced Research Technology, which is comprised of a suite of advanced materials characterization and analysis tools, reports directly to ORED. Similarly, a new cleanroom is nearing completion (scheduled to come on-line in 2013) as a facility reporting directly to ORED.

Economic Development. At various points during my time with ORED, UNT's Economic Development operations have been under different vice presidential units. Currently, Economic Development functions are under ORED and include a research park (Discovery Park), a business incubator, and engagement with various university and community innovation and partnership initiatives.

At least as important as (if not perhaps more important than) my roles in leading and managing the operations of the Office of Research and Economic Development, are the various synergistic roles that I currently and have previously carried out, both within the University of North Texas and with outside communities on behalf of UNT. Those two sets of roles are described separately below.

Synergistic Roles within UNT

Research Clusters. Since I joined ORED in 2008, we have partnered with the Office of the Provost to conduct several different research cluster competitions. Out of those competitions, 15 cross-disciplinary topical areas (research clusters) were chosen for multi-year strategic faculty hiring on the basis of their potential to become focal research strengths at UNT. An additional six areas were chosen to receive a single faculty hire in hopes of becoming viable next-generation clusters. Because these hires were intended to be for the topical area (i.e., not for a specific department) and interdisciplinary (likely involving multiple departments and even multiple colleges), the hiring processes differed dramatically from typical chain-of-command hiring. So the AVPRs were placed in the role of Cluster Liaisons to work with the VPR, Provost, cluster coordinators, chairs, and deans to devise, refine, and carry out communications and administrative processes to carry out these hires. To date, 24 research cluster hires have been successfully completed, 19 at a senior level. They involve appointments and cross-appointments in disciplines as diverse as new media art, music composition, biology, chemistry, physics, logistics, computer science, music composition, political science, materials science, mathematics, information science, philosophy, and mechanical and energy engineering.

Strategic Plan for Research. In 2010, all public universities in the state of Texas designated as emerging research universities (ERUs) were charged to construct a Strategic Plan for Research to lay out a proposed pathway toward meeting various state-defined benchmarks toward the goal of becoming top-tier research universities. As a state designated ERU, UNT was required to construct and submit such a plan. I was asked by the VPR and Provost to lead the planning/writing team for the plan. The team was composed of the Dean of Graduate Studies, Dean of Undergraduate Studies, Dean of Libraries, and a representative of the Office of Advancement. In this role, I coordinated input from all of the academic deans and cabinet members to shape the planning process. To complicate the planning process, UNT underwent a presidential change, with an Interim President appointed and in place at the time the strategic plan was due to be submitted to the state. I worked closely with the VPR, Provost, Senior AVP for Finance, and Interim President to develop goals, research foci, funding projections, and broad action plans that would be necessary for UNT to achieve the designated benchmarks.

Select Committee to Merge the UNT Strategic Plan and the Strategic Plan for Research. Once the Strategic Plan for Research was filed with the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board (THECB), and a permanent president (Dr. Rawlins) was in place, it became clear that the Strategic Plan for Research needed to be better integrated with the overall institutional strategic plan. The Strategic Plan for Research was structured according to a specific THECB framework. So President Rawlins established the Select Committee to Merge the UNT Strategic Plan and the Strategic Plan for Research, with then VPR Prasad as co-chair. Given my familiarity with the Strategic Plan for Research, I was brought onto the committee to coordinate the merged document.

President’s Public Relations and Image Council. This council has led to the new branding and image campaign to promote UNT’s Four Bold Goals strategic plan and the Green Light to Greatness motto. In addition to my service as a general council member, I have also served as a co-chair of the Go-To University work group.

Coordination with UNT-International. Given the importance of international partnerships to the research enterprise, as well as how international student and faculty recruiting are critical to research excellence in certain fields, ORED’s partnership with UNT-International is vital. In addition to serving on the Global Affairs Committee at UNT, I chaired the search committee that led to the hiring of UNT’s current Vice-Provost for International Affairs (Rick Nader), and have partnered with UNT-International to promote international research collaborations via the International Research Development Fund, and the up-coming International Research Funding Forum.

Partnerships with the Provost's Office. In addition to partnering on the research cluster program as described above, I have been consistently engaged with the Provost's office to ensure seamless coordination and often partnered funding between the Provost's office and ORED. Examples include my service on the Provost's Academic Planning Council, Honorary Degree Committee, and Alternative Space Committee, frequent consultations with the Provost's budgeting and human resources staffs, determinations of startup packages for key research faculty, and the development of partnership programs in areas of research and creativity that are often not associated with a VPR office per se. Two such examples are:

I wrote the initial proposal for the Research and Creativity Enhancement (RCE) program (mentioned above under Intramural Research Funding Programs) which funds time and travel for faculty in the literary and creative arts to pursue large-scale projects that are very difficult to fund via extramural sources. The Provost's office and ORED have been equal partners in supporting the RCE program since its inception.

With the encouragement of the VPR and Provost, I gathered the "arts deans" (i.e., the deans of the College of Music, the College of Visual Arts and Design, and the College of Arts and Sciences) and proposed a collaborative entity that eventually was dubbed the Institute for the Advancement of the Arts. The institute, which resides in the Provost's office but functions under a steering committee comprised of the arts deans and myself, has a storefront gallery presence in downtown Denton (UNT on the Square), employs a full-time executive director, and has sponsored an array of UNT faculty artists as Institute Fellows, and has hosted an impressive succession of Artists in Residence.

Undergraduate Research Programs. I partnered with the dean of UNT's Honor's College to establish and funded UNT's first campus-wide Undergraduate Research Fellowship program. The program provides a stipend to selected undergraduates for semester-long intensive research experiences, and additional travel support for student fellows who present conference papers resulting from the work with their faculty mentors.

Council of Associate Deans of Research. As an important part of keeping UNT's various colleges and schools engaged with ORED, I co-chaired the Council of Associate Deans of Research (CADRe) which meets regularly to discuss strategies for research enhancement, best practices, and barrier reduction to meet the needs of research faculty.

Synergistic Roles on Behalf of UNT to the Broader Professional Community

UNT System Engagement. In 2012, I served on a task force convened by the presidents of UNT and the University of North Texas Health Science Center (UNTHSC) to address preliminary questions associated with the UNT System Chancellor’s proposal to merge UNT and UNTHSC. The task force was comprised of about 24 leaders from UNT, UNTHSC, and the UNT System. In addition to serving as a member of the Research and Clinical Practice work group of the task force, I also co-led (along with the UNTHSC’s Vice President for Administration) the process of constructing and refining the report that resulted from the task force’s work. The coordinated process resulted in a report that was jointly submitted to the UNT System Chancellor by the UNT and UNTHSC Presidents.

State of Texas Engagement. My lead role in coordinating and constructing UNT’s Strategic Plan for Research to the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board (THECB) is discussed in detail above. In addition, I have also served as UNT’s representative to the THECB’s Select Interim Committee on the Feasibility of a Statewide Technology Database. This service resulted in a set of options identified for the Texas legislature to understand how an integrated database for statewide research and technology assets could be constructed and funded.

National Engagement. I have maintained involvement with a number of national organizations and groups that allow me to have a finger on the pulse of research excellence nationally. These include Council on Government Relations, the Federal Demonstration Partnership, the Association of Public and Land-Grant Universities (and its Council on Research Policy and Graduate Education), the Federal Office of Research Integrity (as UNT’s Research Integrity Officer), Public Responsibility in Medicine and Research, and the National Organization of Research Development Professionals.

International Partnerships. As the UNT liaison to this university’s Chile Program partners, I have coordinated several research-based inter-institutional collaborations between UNT’s Chile Program and its Chilean partners. For example, I have worked with the program staff to secure UNT-owned research equipment in Chile, coordinated the UNT-Chile institutional agreements with the University of Magallanes and with the Institute for Ecology and Biodiversity in cooperation with the President, the VPR, the Provost, and UNT-International, and attended meetings at the US Department of State to facilitate the UNT-Chile Program being named as a priority program within the environmental chapter of the US-Chile Free Trade Agreement. As mentioned above, I also oversaw UNT’s joint seed funding competition with the Autonomous University of the State of Mexico (UAEM)—a central component of the formal partnership agreement between UNT and UAEM.

In spite of budget cuts, began funding in 2011 of $2,000 per College faculty member for travel to attend conferences for paper presentations.

Have procured research grant funding of over $2.5 million at the University of New Orleans and served as principle and co-principle of the grants.

Have worked with two donors and achieved two Endowed Chairs for the College of Business Administration totalling $2,000,000.

Funded and instituted a marketing campaign for the College of Business Administration. Funding was invested in 4 billboards, newspaper advertisements in City Business and the Times Picayune, and laminated points-of-pride cards for each department of the College. The campaign was conducted from February 2011 to July 2011. Also funded and invested in advertising and promotion for the Master of Business Administration and Executive Master of Business Administration programs.

Created and funded the College of Business Administration Career Center in January 2012. This Center has been key in the retention of students. The Center provides counseling in resume building, coursework, career advising, and entrepreneurship. It also serves as liaison for students seeking faculty with expertise in their particular job focus. The Center is open every weekday and one night each week for students taking coursework at night. It is the only one of its kind at the university.

Procured funding of $200,000 from donor to purchase state-of-the-art media system for the College of Business Administration.

Secured funding and invested $493,000 in the School of Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism Administration Building. This investment includes a courtyard addition to the building, and remodeling of the production kitchen, demonstration lab, and the dining room. Construction is also underway for a social science room and a property management room. Future funding is being undertaken for a wine laboratory, offices, and a larger dining room in addition to the current dining room.

In January 2011, funded and began the Urban Entrepreneurship Program in partnership with the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation, a Kansas City, Mo. nonprofit known as the world’s largest foundation devoted to entrepreneurship. The partnership has resulted in the only university operated accelerator program in the state of Louisiana. The program fosters job creation and promotes opportunities for economic profitability, individual and business success and organizational sustainability.
Substantially increased scholarship funding by securing more than $550,000 in the College of Business Administration at the University of New Orleans.
